Anatomy of a Good Prompt

Strong prompts usually include some of these parts: role, task, context, constraints, and output format.

Example: You are a tutor for first-year students in Uganda. Explain photosynthesis in simple English in 5 bullet points. Avoid advanced jargon.

Vague vs Clear

Vague: Write about climate.

Clearer: Write 3 paragraphs for a Year 1 geography essay on how irregular rainfall affects smallholder farmers in Uganda. Simple academic English. No invented statistics.

First Improvements

Checklist: state the goal, name the audience, set length or format, add one constraint such as no fake sources or Uganda examples.

Practice by rewriting one vague prompt from your own week.

Reflect: Which part do you forget most often: audience, format, or constraints?

Closing

Module 2 focuses on instruction clarity, roles, audience, and tone.
